HOUSE IN SESSION 26 HOURS; DESPERATE FIGHT OF REGULARS.

Deputies Scoured City of Washington Trying to Round Up Members of Congress to Form a Quorum.

RECESS TAKEN AT 2 O'CLOCK

The Speaker is Charged by Insurgents and Democrats With Using His Power to Escape Defeat—Regulars Confident of Winning in the End.

United Press Telegram.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—A motion to take a recess, which was offered early this afternoon, carried by a vote of 161 to 151. Speaker Cannon voted "aye," as did several insurgents. This is taken to indicate that they favor a compromise of some sort with the Regulars.

The Insurgents and Democrats this afternoon rejected three regular propositions for a compromise. The first was for the appointment of a rules committee consisting of 10 members, but contained no prohibition against the Speaker. The second for a committee of 15 members, but still no prohibition against the Speaker. The third and last proposition was to adopt the resolution offered by Congressman Norris, providing the paragraph eliminating the Speaker as a member of the committee be rejected.

The recess was only taken for a few hours and the House will resume its sessions later in the afternoon.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—With no sign of a cessation the Insurgents and Regulars in the House of Representatives were wrangling at 10 o'clock this morning with the same test for battle that marked the beginning of the fight to unseat Speaker Cannon yesterday afternoon.

The House up to that time had been in session for 26 consecutive hours. Twenty deputies are scouring the city to find enough Republican regulars to make a quorum.

The question before the house is a point of order against the Norris amendment to the rules, which Speaker Cannon refuses to pass upon.

Congressman John Dalzell of Pennsylvania provided over the House this morning while Cannon napped. Members are asleep on chairs, divans, mahogany tables and floors. Members attempting to leave are arrested under an order forced through by the Insurgents and Democrats. Speaker Cannon refused to issue warrants for the arrest of the missing members, but the deputies went searching for them anyway.

Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio was one of the first victims of the rule. He was greeted with laughter when he appeared.

The motion of the Regulars to adjourn from 1:50 A. M. until noon was defeated, 124 to 111. The Democrats complained of the lack of results on the part of the Sergeant-at-Arms, Mr. Casson, called to the bar, explained he was doing his best to locate the absent members.

Congressman Hollingsworth appeared at 1 A. M. He was made clear through, having been aroused from his hotel. He demanded to know who caused his arrest.

"If there are grounds for civil action you can sue the Republicans," suggested Olie James of Kentucky.

Speaker Cannon returned to the chair at 6 o'clock showing effects of the strain.

Speaker Cannon is charged with using his power to conduct a personal filibuster in his efforts to escape defeat. This is what his opponents feared at him when he refused to issue warrants for the arrest of the absent members.

At 7:20 there was a quorum present. Congressman Olmstead, a Pennsylvania Regular, moved that efforts to find absent members cease. This motion was defeated. The Insurgents and Democrats claim to have a majority of seven but the Regulars are confident of winning out.

An effort to secure a recess of 30 minutes to sweep the chamber and remove the foul air failed. The Insurgents at 10:25 gathered in Congressman Gaidner's room to confer. The galleries filled early and many Senators were present.

"How long will it last," was asked Representative Dwight, the Republican "whip."

"Ask me something easy," he replied. "It depends on the Speaker and it is certain they will not enter Joe Cannon's trap, or making any rollings before he is ready."

Congressman Norris who introduced the resolution which precipitated the battle and the session will last "probably until the patience of the House is exhausted."

Congressman J. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia, relieved Speaker Cannon at 11 o'clock. A number of sleepy members looked for in the new "Speaker."

At 11:45 the Democrats were singing "Old Black Joe" and "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." Then they sang hymns which ended in popular songs.

Excitement reigned when Seneca E. Payne and Congressman Shackelford clashed. Shackelford declared that the Speaker had abdicated the chair and that the House was in a state of anarchy. Payne leaped to his feet and demanded that Shackelford be arrested for leaving the house without permission. Shackelford declared he had been present 22 hours out of the 24. He wasn't arrested.

When Cannon replaced Moore in the chair it was nearly 12 o'clock. Nearly every member was present and the galleries were jammed. The crowd stood 20 deep in the corridors behind the gallery doors.

"I don't need any sleep," remarked "Uncle Joe" as he intoned in. "The older I grow the less sleep I need. I need exercise and the open air." He then walked out and left Olmstead in his place.

Mrs. Taft was present and in her party was Frank H. Kellogg, famous as a "trust buster." A committee of Insurgents, Regulars and Democrats is attempting a compromise.

Two Men Held; Crimes Against Little Girls

UNIONTOWN, March 18.—James Hampshire, a well known man of Newell, was committed to jail last evening, charged with having committed a criminal assault upon Sarah, a 12-year-old daughter of L. J. McDonough of Sewell. At the preliminary hearing before Justice C. C. Garrett of Brownsville it is alleged that the child was taken to Hampshire's house to visit Mrs. Hampshire, but that she was away and Hampshire enticed her in into a bedroom, and although she screamed, and her clothing was torn he accomplished his purpose. The child then went to Constable Shaffer's and seemingly greatly excited told her story. Hampshire admitted the child was at his house during the absence of his wife, but said that he only played with her.

James Shaw, charged with assaulting 12-year old Victoria Kanasky of Fairbance, was held for court by Justice James Farrell yesterday. John Lewis, a negro, after the hearing entered a charge against Shaw for threatening his life. The girl said that Shaw had enticed her with promises of candy, had tried to assault her but had not succeeded as Lewis' arrival stopped him. Lewis said that Shaw threatened to "fix him." Annie, Victoria's sister, aged 10, said Shaw had given her five cents to watch the other children and keep them away while he was with Victoria. It was claimed that he had been making presents of candy to children in the vicinity and acting suspiciously. Victoria's parents were not present at the hearing. Shaw denied ever trying to take advantage of the child and claimed he would prove his innocence.

FOUR PLAIN DRUNKS.

Faced Burgess Evans in Police Court This Morning.

Four drunks faced Burgess Evans in police court this morning. Charles Trader of Coalbrook made his usual appeal for credit and produced receipts to show that he always paid up in the past. He was let go on a promise to produce $3.50 this afternoon.

Edward Barrett of Hollidaysburg was given 48 hours for being drunk. Bartley Welch is alleged to have refused to play for 55 cents worth of drinks on the West Side. He was let off on paying $2.

John Patko of Juniata was drunk last night, the police finding 18 cents in his pocketbook. The money was returned but John was advised to remain for a couple of days.

THE HIBERNIANS AT ANNUAL BANQUET.

Big Turnout of Members and Guests at the Armory Last Night.

ALL OF FAYETTE REPRESENTED

Frank Hanlon, Oldest Member of Ancient Order of Hibernians in the World, Present—"God Save Ireland" Sung by 400 Voices.

It was a jolly and loyal gathering of Irishmen, their wives, sisters and sweethearts that assembled last evening at the Armory to do honor to the Emerald Isle and the patron saint of the day. The occasion was the third annual banquet of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Fayette county and was attended by over 400 people.

Hibernians were present from the eight divisions of the order which includes, Uniontown, Everson, Trotter, Dunbar, Adalade, Lehighville No. 1, Fayette City and Connellville. The spirit of the Hibernian motto "Friendship, Unity and True Christian Charity" reigned throughout the evening and from 8 o'clock until 2 o'clock this morning the spacious armory was the scene of one of the largest and most enjoyable social gatherings held here for some time.

A feature of the evening was a handsomely appointed banquet. Not the smallest detail had been overlooked by the committee in charge and the menu could not have been improved upon. Each dish represented some particular place in Ireland. The program of the evening opened with a few introductory remarks by Lawrence Donegan, a prominent local Hibernian. Patrick May, townmaster, opened the toast with "Why We Are Here." Rev. Father John T. Burns gave a stirring and appropriate address. Mrs. M. L. Carroll of Lehighville followed with a vocal solo which was rendered in a very capable manner. The main address of the evening was by Rev. Father Maurice McCarthy, County Chaplain of Allegheny county. Rev. McCarthy's address was interesting from the beginning to the end. His address was very appropriate and was delivered in a very impressive manner.

Rev. McCarthy stated that the history of Ireland for the last 150 years was interwoven with that of America and that in the American Revolutionary War the first shot was fired by an Irishman, John Sullivan, four months before the battle of Lexington. His talk was replete with humorous anecdotes and funny sayings.

At the conclusion of the program there was dancing including the Irish jig and reels in which many participated. The event was one that will long be remembered by the Irish of Connellville and surrounding towns. It was the leading one of St. Patrick's Day and a more fitting event could not have been planned to honor the day. For hospitality the Hibernians are ranked among the first in the land, and good fellowship reigned supreme last evening. The old men and women forgot their gray hairs and age and entered into the amusements of the evening with more zeal than many of the younger persons present.

Frank Hanlon, the oldest member of the Order of Ancient Order of Hibernians in the world, was present last night and enjoyed the festivities immensely.

The true Irish spirit was shown by all present when over 400 voices rendered "God Save Ireland." Special street cars conveyed the visiting Hibernians to and from the banquet.

FINED AND PINCHED.

Negro Laborer Made Threats Against Contractor Bernard O'Connor.

Some quick work was done yesterday afternoon in the case of W. M. Armstrong, a negro, who had a row with Contractor Bernard O'Connor. Armstrong didn't want to obey orders and was fined. He then entered into an argument over the matter with O'Connor and ended up by making divers threats.

Mr. O'Connor walked down town, told Officer Thomas McDonald to go after the man, and then went before Squire Clark with an information. Squire Clark had just finished the information when McDonald walked in with the negro. There was an immediate hearing, Armstrong paying the costs and promising to behave himself.

ROTTLER ACQUITTED QUICKLY BY JURY.

L. Sapolsky, Prosecutor, Thrown Into Jail on Suspended Sentence.

EXTORTION CASE FELL FLAT

Before Jury Whose Vote Was Unanimous for Acquitting Connellville Chief of Police—Costs Were Also Placed on Prosecutor.

UNIONTOWN, March 18.—After taking the testimony of a large number of witnesses and the strong plea of the attorneys on both sides of the case, Acting Chief Barthold Rottler of Connellville, was acquitted of a charge of extortion, after the jury had been out about five minutes.

The charge was preferred by L. Sapolsky, a well known junk dealer in Connellville, and he will have to pay the costs which from the number of witnesses will be heavy.

The case which lasted all day yesterday before Judge J. Q. Van Swearingen in Criminal Court Room No. 1, was contested with much vigor. It is said that the verdict of acquittal was unanimously reached on the first ballot.

With Rottler's acquittal Sapolsky was arrested on a process and was removed to jail upon a case in which he was found guilty a year ago when convicted of receiving stolen goods. At that time sentence was suspended.

Rottler who has been on the police force in Connellville for about 14 years, much of that time as chief, and now as Acting Chief, and also Constable in the Second Ward, was alleged to have demanded and received $100 from Sapolsky for refraining from serving a warrant of Sapolsky charging the latter with receiving stolen goods.

The addresses were made to the jury by Attorney B. F. Stirling for the defense and W. C. McKean for the prosecution. District Attorney David W. Henderson assisted in the prosecution and Attorney W. E. Crow assisted in the defense.

Dave Harrison Dies From Attack Of Pneumonia

Dave Harrison is dead. Pneumonia caused his demise at 9 o'clock this morning and one of the best known colored men of this section is no more. Harrison was about 50 years old. Many people knew Dave, but none better than Contractor D. F. Girard, for whom he worked many years. A short time ago Harrison left Girard to take up work on the coke ovens.

For the first time in years Harrison was taken sick recently. Pneumonia developed and it proved fatal. Harrison worked for Dave Girard for 10 years. Hundreds of people have worked at the dexterity the man showed in driving a wagon piled many feet high with frames, never meeting a mishap.

In the 10 years Dave worked for him, Contractor Girard said today, "he never missed but one day. That time he had to attend court, but I didn't know it at the time because he had another man on the job. Dave could always be depended on."

THE REGULATION

OF THE FOREIGNER'S GUN.

The law which forbids the foreigner to own or carry a gun is declared by the slightly overhauled Washington Observer to be an unconstitutional outrage. In the language of the foreign tongue, "Mebbe yes, and mebbe no."

The enactment of the law was prompted by the fact that too many foreigners with too many guns made too many murder cases for our courts to try at each term. The law was founded in public morality and designed in practice to promote public economy; its aim was to save the foreigner from himself, to protect the community from his lawlessness, to conserve public order and to reduce as much as possible the cost of crime.

There is some question whether the law is effective in accomplishing what it designs. It certainly has not prevented foreign residents from rioting against themselves and killing and wounding each other, nor from attacking upon American citizens, nor from their violations of the game laws. The Washington county constable who played detective to get the guns of foreigners and hale them into court was exceptionally vigilant. The average constable is not so particular.

It is evident, however, that there are too many deadly weapons carried around the country, and that the curtailment of the practice cannot do any harm and may accomplish much good. Upon the whole, therefore, perhaps the law should stand, however inefficient its efficiency or however reprehensible the methods of an occasional officer may prove.

THE ACADIA OF FAYETTE COUNTY.

Brownsville township is accused of being the modern Acadia. The Chartered Mall makes the accusation in the following terms:

Brownsville township, Fayette county, might well rank in the class of those communities whose "people are happy because their annals are vacant." This is not a disparaging inference, however, nor does it reflect upon the intelligence, progress or integrity of the people who inhabit the political division of our neighboring county. The annals of the Brownsville township people are blank for one thing because they are vacant in the item of State taxes. The tax assessor there reports no money at interest, no mortgages on which to pay interest, nor any notes in fact due at important times. This would imply that the Brownsville township people are oppressed by neither poverty or riches, and should be in fact local Acadians.

Social economists tell us that the ideal condition of life is which man cannot attain great wealth nor yet be oppressed by the fear of want of poverty. Under these conditions a higher degree of peace and contentment and a development is attained, in which the vital problems of life may be solved. Such a people are the ones whose annals are blank so far as the accepted form of history goes. As a matter of fact little of the real history of any people is ever known or written. It is the unrecorded history, the extraordinary events, the wars, the misfortunes, the catastrophes, the accidents, the exploits of the individuals, that are noted as history. What the rest of people who constitute a nation do, think or say, is rarely written. Yet after all is said and done the country or community that leaves least in the history of the world's turmoil is perhaps the richest and most contented and individual happiness. Surely a community which the tax assessor cannot find to trouble and notes and mortgages do not fall due must be the ideal spot in which to live.

Brownsville township is a small but honest community. It has no money at interest because its people are not money lenders but just happy and contented American citizens with enough to live well upon and always have a "hand out" for the poor and needy.

Colonel Roosevelt narrowly escaped becoming the editor of the New York Sun. William J. Arkell, publisher of Judge, had the paper bought, but when the Sun family found out who was to edit it they refused to complete the deal. But the Roosevelt would have been a worse editor than the editor of the Sun in writing down the strong words.

Engineer of Work Train Tells Story Of The Capture of B. Frank Smith.

James Kennedy, engineer of the Baltimore & Ohio work train, the crew of which had a part in the capture of B. Frank Smith last week, tells the following account of the capture of Smith:

"The morning of the capture of B. Frank Smith in all of the papers given Lewis Fee all of the credit. In regard to this I will give a true account of the capture.

"While coming from Opokiska to Little Falls with a work train Lewis Fee, section foreman, stopped the work train east of Beechwood and told the crew that Smith had passed about five minutes before and to look out for him. Fee rode about a mile west of Beechwood and got off and walked back towards Beechwood.

"The work train proceeded to Little Falls and went to work. In walking back to Beechwood Fee met Smith face to face and was afraid to tackle him. Smith asked him how far it was to Mountaintop and Fee told him about 19 miles. Fee on his arrival at Beechwood asked M. M. Malone to go with him and help him take Smith. Accompanied by M. M. Malone and four other section men Fee started on a hand car and overtook Smith about two miles west of Beechwood, and his nerve seemed to have failed him again and told the men with him that they had better go on to Little Falls and double up with other section men. On his arrival at Little Falls Fee found the work train working there and he told them of his experience. After talking and laughing about what they would do if Smith came along, Freeman S. L. Curtis, 'Come on and show your nerve,' and the two started up the track towards Smith who was not yet in sight on account of the curve in the track. They were followed in the following manner: Brakenman C. E. Radcliffe, M. M. Malone, work train foreman, Ingle Malone and the last one to leave was Lewis Fee.

"When Smith was taken Ingle Malone and S. L. Curtis were in front, C. E. Radcliffe and G. Frankenberg next and M. M. Malone and Lewis Fee last. Smith walked down the middle of the track and was grasped by Ingle Malone and S. L. Curtis. He was quickly searched by Radcliffe and Frankenberg, they finding no arms on him.

"Smith offered no resistance and told his captors that he was on his way to give himself up but that they would get the reward. He was brought to Little Falls and put on train No. 51 and taken to the jail at Uniontown by M. M. Malone and Lewis Fee.

"Fee did not have hold of Smith until he was put on the baggage car. He was landed in jail safely and the papers for the reward were drawn up by Justice Jucker at Morgantown and the captors received their share of the reward as follows: S. L. Curtis, Ingle Malone, C. E. Radcliffe, G. Frankenberg, M. M. Malone $50 each; Lewis Fee, the balance which was $250."

CIVIL COURT ROUTINE IN SOMERSET COUNTY

No Decision Yet Announced by Court in Water Company Injunction Case.

Special to The Courier.
SOMERSET, March 18.—Judge Keener has not yet allowed the injunction in the equity case of Nathaniel Blanch vs. the Manufacturers' Water Company of Johnstown, a proceeding for injunction to restrain the defendant company from flooding a part of the plaintiff's farm and also from changing the public roads and also in Conemaugh township, thereby forcing the plaintiff to travel several miles further in making trips to Johnstown. It is not known when Judge Keener will make public his decision in the matter.

On Monday the regular March term of civil court convened with a list of 10 civil cases set for trial in a two-week term of court. Of this number 15 have been disposed of. The first case taken up was that of S. D. Livergood vs. John T. Bannocraft et al., a proceeding in which the judgment of a magistrate was opened. The following cases were settled: Little Rogers vs. O. E. Berkeley, interpled; S. P. Barclay vs. Morrison Music Company, interpled; Annie Snyder vs. B. & O. railroad, assumpsit; D. S. Lyon vs. Samuel J. Fritz, appeal; B. J. Thallheimer & Company vs. Lewis M. Shultz, appeal; R. A. Barclay vs. Somerset Automobile Company, assumpsit; W. R. Beerbower vs. B. & O. railroad, appeal; John C. Gladisberg vs. Joshua L. Shaulis, appeal.

The following cases were continued: William J. Faux vs. Wells Creek Coal Company, assumpsit; Hollinger Bros. vs. Conemaugh Coal Company, assumpsit; Annie Hostetter vs. Lizzie Schenover, trespass; Piclands-Magee Company vs. Southern Coal Company, trespass; Cora J. Otto vs. Central Accident Insurance Company, of Pittsburg, assumpsit; Edwin Winters vs. Conemaugh Coal Company, trespass; Frank Fryburg and wife vs. B. & O. railroad, trespass; Connelville Grocery Company vs. Ida E. Miller, appeal; W. H. Zufall vs. S. D. Livergood et al., assumpsit; John A. Johnson vs. Shade Smokeless Coal Company, trespass, settled.

Fascinating Hair.

Easy To Stop Hair Falling Out, and Dandruff Also.

No one doubts that it is the duty of every woman to look as charming as possible. Every woman knows why she wants to be beautiful and attractive.

A woman with a scant hair, dull and lifeless, has lost half her charm. How many times have we heard the expression "the crowning glory of a woman is her hair."

Nowadays, thanks to Parisian Sage, almost every woman can have hair so radiant and so glorious that it attracts fascinations and compels admiration.

Parisian Sage, the scientific and ideal hair rejuvenator and tonic, will cause hair to grow. It will turn lustrous, with great hair into lustrous and bewitchingly luxuriant hair in a few days.

It is a most delightful hair dressing that kills the dandruff germs, stops falling hair, and cures dandruff in two weeks, or your money back.

A CLEVER PLAY.

"A Gentleman From Mississippi" Pleased Two Audiences Yesterday.

"A Gentleman From Mississippi" made a hit here in two performances yesterday at the Solomon theatre. Robert A. Fischer as the Senator and Huns Robert, as "Dad" Haines, his secretary, made a team hard to beat. They were ably assisted by a large supporting company.

The feminine parts were well taken. Both of Senator Landor's "daughters" were pretty as pictures. Miss Leah Baird and Miss Jane Fearley are two remarkably pretty girls, either on or off the stage. Miss Olive Harp made a splendid Mrs. Spangler and Miss Adelaide Wile was also very clever in her part.

The play struck a chord of sympathy for this is an era of political plays and dramas which expose the rotten core of some political games.

Taken as a whole "A Gentleman From Mississippi" is worth while, if only for the chance to laugh at the quaint old Southern Senator, his lively secretary and a mighty clever supporting cast.

Easter Tailoring!

To Young Men We Have This to Say:

We'll take your order for Easter delivery and get the clothes out on time, made exactly as you say, which is better than paying the same money for ready-made guessfits (that Tom, Dick and Harry may also be wearing) because some other good tailor may be "too busy" (with his limited facilities) to promise you Easter delivery.

More than that, we'll introduce you to the largest retail stock of woollens you can find anywhere—fresh from the mills, owned at mill prices, making competition an absolute impossibility. Better still, ours is guaranteed tailoring—safe tailoring.

RED HOT FIGHT ON IN CONGRESS.

House Organization and Cannon's Hold Is Threatened.

AN ALL NIGHT SESSION HELD

Biggest How in Years Started by Combination of the Insurgents and the Democrats—Organization Members Resort to Filibuster.

Washington, March 18.—The Republican organization of the house is engaged in a fight for its existence. At midnight the struggle, which had continued throughout one of the most stirring days that have ever been witnessed in the house, was still in progress. Neither the combination of insurgent Republicans and Democrats who precipitated the contest nor the Cannon organization was in control and a state of chaos exists.

It was a day of dramatic situations in the house. Caught off his guard by Representative Norris of Nebraska, one of the insurgent leaders, Speaker Cannon entertained a motion that resulted in precipitating a rough and tumble fight over the rules, a situation that the leaders have been trying to stave off all session, and one for which the insurgents had been waiting patiently.

Insurgents and Democrats Confident.
Seldom in the history of the house has there been witnessed such exciting incidents as marked the proceedings. The insurgents and Democrats, flushed with recent victories, went into the fray with confidence and, after once rebuking the speaker, they returned to the attack by unexpectedly throwing into the house a resolution proposing the creation of a new committee on rules and making the speaker ineligible for appointment to the new committee.

The innocent cause of all the excitement of the day was the Cannon resolution that kicked up so much excitement recently. The house passed this resolution, in due season, after a little hurry, during which the house rebuked the speaker by refusing to entertain a motion that he put a sufficient number of insurgents joined with the Democrats to bring about this result.

In passing this Cannon resolution however, the house endorsed the proposition that this measure was under consideration as a matter of constitutional privilege. This principle, once recognized, the insurgents took advantage of the opening.

Representative Norris Leads Assault.
Representative Norris led the attack. Rising in his place he addressed the speaker. He was at once recognized. "I desire to present a resolution which is entitled to recognition under the constitutional privilege," said Mr. Norris.

Speaker Cannon, unsuspecting the trap into which he was about to be led, caused the resolution to be read. It provides for a new committee on rules to be elected by the house and to go into effect at once.
The fight began at once and it will go down into the history of the house as one of the most stirring partisan struggles ever witnessed in that body.

Arranged on one side were thirty or more Republicans and the Democratic minority and on the other the responsible Republican leadership.
Twice the leaders tried to adjourn the house and once to take a recess, but they were voted down. Every effort was made by the leaders to bring in absentees.

Telegrams were dispatched to New York, Philadelphia and other cities to bring in seventeen members whom they hope will help out their cause.
At midnight four of these members,
Calk and McGraw of Pennsylvania, Cook and McGraw of New York and Stearns of Maine, reached the house.

Hurry Call For Absentees.
The first two had rushed to Washington from Philadelphia and Albany and Stearns hurried from New York.
Others of the regular supporters are expected.

The Norris resolution creating a new committee on rules was patterned after one introduced in the house in the fifty-second congress by Representative Tom Watson, the Georgia Populist. The Democrats controlled the house then. Crisp was speaker then and the Watson resolution was given no consideration.

The Norris resolution provides for a committee of fifteen to be representative of the various sections, it being specifically provided that the speaker shall not be a member of this organization.

If this resolution goes through it will mean the end of the present organization rule in the house. The insurgent and Democratic contended at midnight that they had a majority of five for the resolution. The house leaders say that with the seventeen absentees they will be able to defeat the resolution and that they will not put the resolution to vote until they are certain of their ground.

The spirits of the organization men fell when Richardson of Alabama, Robinson of Arkansas and Humphreys of Mississippi (Democrats) arrived in the chamber. They also had made quick dashes to the national capital from New York in response to telegrams. Three sick men had been put out of their beds earlier in the night to reinforce the regulars, but without avail.

FEATHERMAN & SUMBERG.

At 1 o'clock Representative Mann of Illinois, a regular, was addressing the house. The Cannon forces showed no intention at that hour of putting the Norris resolution to a vote and the insurgents were still determined not to assent to an adjournment.

By actual count at 1:20 twelve representatives were asleep in their seats, but Mr. Mann was still going strong. Representative Crumpacker, whose census resolution started the trouble, was one of those slumbering.

Senate Leaders Taking Notice.
Three amendments modifying the provisions of the pending administration bill to amend the interstate commerce law are being worked out by the senate leaders. One of these amendments relates to the control of the interstate commerce commission over water routes of transportation.

There has been so much opposition manifested toward the language of the pending bill on this feature that the leaders are disposed to yield to it by rewording the language of the Hepburn rate law as it now exists.

Another suggested amendment proposes to give the shipper the right to appear by counsel in appeals to be heard before the commerce court. The third proposed amendment has to do with the feature of the bill which Senator Cummins has maintained respects the Sherman antitrust law as applied to railroads. Senator Aldrich reiterated in debate that if the language of the section did not confer upon the interstate commerce commission the control over traffic agreements between carriers he was in favor of changing the language to make such control certain.

Wireless Bill Reported Favorably.
The bill requiring ocean-going vessels carrying fifty or more passengers to be equipped with radio-communication apparatus and operators was favorably reported to the senate from the committee on commerce.

FOX'S THRILLING RIDE

Twice Makes Journey Up and Down
Water Shaft at Miles-Minute Speed.
Gilberton, Pa., March 18.—Whirled up and down the 1,100 feet of the Gilberton water shaft at the speed of a mile a minute, clinging tightly with both hands to the rope, and twice in-mersed twelve feet in water without injury was the thrilling experience of Rufus Fox.

Fox, while removing ice from the head of the shaft, slipped into the mouth. Throwing off his hands he managed to clutch the hoisting rope, to which he clung safely. Owing to the high water the tanks were being worked to their limit by the engine, and Fox had to make the fearful journey down and twice up, each time being plunged far below the surface of the water in the pump. A woman saw his peril and gave the alarm in time to save a third plunge.

GREEN IS WANTED BADLY

As Banker, Horse Thief and Church Worker He Became Famous.
Indianapolis, Ind., March 18.—The local authorities are eager to get possession of Robert H. Green, the Waynetown (Ind.) banker, horse thief,
Sunday school superintendent, who escaped from the penitentiary at Michigan City.

Green is under arrest in Cleveland.
He is one of the most remarkable criminals in police annals. Early in 1898 he was regarded as an ideal citizen and business man of Waynetown.
He controlled a bank and was active in church work. While regarded as a leading citizen he was leading a double life. His horse thieving operations extended to almost every section of the state. Stolen horses traced to Waynetown were never found because they were in one of Green's barns and no one suspected the banker of being a horse thief.

NEW USE FOR ELECTRIC FANS.

They Will Help Heat a Building as Well as Keep It Cool.

The Electric Fan should not be stored away. Its services are as essential in winter as in summer. It can be used to advantage by placing it in the intake of a hot air furnace to force the circulation of hot air to distant rooms and to heat rooms quickly.
The breeze from an electric fan blowing through a radiator circulates the heated air and gives a more even distribution of heat and assists matterially in quickly heating large rooms and halls.

The circulation of heat by the use of the electric fan saves a large percentage of fuel and is well worth trying.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronoque, Mo.—"I was simply a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my heart fluttering and I could not even receive a letter.
Every month I had such a bearing down sensation, as if the lower parts would fall out." Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done my nerves a great deal of good
and has also relieved the bearing down. I recommended it to some friends and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs.
Mae McNamara, Oronoque, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman.
St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing down pains and pains in lower parts. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanative Wash and now I have no more troubles that way."—Mrs. A. L. Herzog, 6722
Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one,
do not hesitate to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a tri-ble to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

Developed Rabies.

Two months after being bitten by a dog, still at large, a mare belonging to Oliver Appleby of Waltersburg devel- oped rabies and had to be shot.

English Machine Acts on the Throat and Muscles and Relieves Distress.
After the stomach has been abused
for years by the use of indigestible food and drink, the blood becomes poisonous and the poisonous juices im-pregnate the whole system. Acute indigestion and terrible nausea follow.
A few doses of English Machine will put new life in the tissues and muscles and practically form a fresh lining.

CLEVELAND MOFFETT

An impatient hand sounded at the door, while a harsh voice called out those terrifying words, "Open in the name of the law!"

With a mingling of alarm and satisfaction Mother Bonnet obeyed the summons, and a moment later as she unlatched the door a fat man with a bristling red mustache and keen eyes pushed forward into the room where the lovers were waiting. Two burly policemen followed him.

"Ah," exclaimed Gibelin, with a gesture of relief as his eye fell on Kiteledge. Then, producing a paper, he said: "I am from headquarters. I am looking for—" He studied the writing in perplexity. "You are M. Louis Kiteledge?"

"Yes, sir."

"I have a warrant for your arrest." But Alice staggered forward. "Why do you arrest him?"

The man from headquarters answered, shrugging his shoulders: "I don't know what he's done. He's charged with murder."

CHAPTER V.

COQUENIL GETS IN THE GAME.

It was a long night at the Ansonia and a hard night for M. Griz. France is a land of inquisitive, red tape, where even such a simple thing as getting born or getting married leads to endless formalities. And then, of the complicated procedure involved in so serious a matter as getting married, especially in a fashionable restaurant. Long before the customary hour had elapsed his report there arrived no less a person than M. Simon, the chief of police, round faced and affable, a brisk, dapper man whose ready smile had led more than one trusting criminal into regretted confidences. And a little later came M. Hauteville, the judge in charge of the case, a cold, severe figure, handsome in his younger days, but now, it was said, by social disappointments and ill health. He was in evening dress, having been summoned posthaste from the theater.

The officials discussed the case with a wide variety of opinions and conclusions. The chief of police and M. Poqueot were strong in the theory of murder. M. Hauteville leaned toward suicide. The doctor was undecided.

"But the shot was fired at the closest possible range," insisted the judge. "The pistol was not a foot from the man's head. How else account for the facts?"

Martinez was a strong, active man. He would never have allowed a murderer to get so close to him without a struggle. But there is not the slightest sign of a struggle, no disorder in the room, no disarrangement of the man's clothing. It's evidently suicide."

"If it's suicide," objected Poqueot, "where is the weapon? The man died instantly, didn't he, doctor?"

"Undoubtedly," agreed the doctor. "Then the pistol must have fallen beside him or remained in his hand. Well, where is it?"

"Ask the woman who was here. How do you know she didn't take it?"

"Nonsense!" put in the chief. "Why should she take it? To throw suspicion on herself? Besides, I'll show you another reason why it's not suicide. The man was shot through the right eye. The ball went in straight and clean, tearing its way to the brain. Well, in the whole history of suicides there is not one case where a man has shot himself in the eye. Did you ever hear of such a case, doctor?"

"Never," answered Joubert. "A man will shoot himself in the mouth, in the temple, in the heart, anywhere, but not in the eye. There would be an unconquerable shrinking from that. So I say it's murder."

The judge shook his head. "And the murderer?"

"Ah, that's another question. We must find the woman. And we must understand the role of this American."

"No woman ever fired that shot or planned this crime," declared the commissary, unconsciously echoing Coquennil's opinion.

"There's better reason to argue that the American never did it," retorted the judge.

"What reason?"

"The woman ran away, didn't she? And the American didn't. If he had killed this man do you think anything would have brought him back here for that cloak and bag?"

"A good point," nodded the chief.

"Ah, yes; she knows," reflected the commissary. "And, gentlemen, all our talk brings us back to this—we must find that woman."

At half past 1 Gibelin appeared to announce the arrest of Kiteledge. He had tried vainly to get from the American some clue to the owner of cloak and bag.

"I'll see what I can squeeze out of him in the morning," said Hauteville grimly.

"You've got your work cut out," snapped the detective. "He's a stubborn devil."

In the midst of these perplexities and technicalities a note was brought in for M. Poqueot. The commissary glanced at it quickly and then, with a word of excuse, left the room, returning a few minutes later and whispering earnestly to M. Simon.

"You say he is here?" exclaimed the latter. "I thought he was sailing for—"

M. Poqueot bent closer and whispered again.

"Paul Coquennil!" exclaimed the chief. "Why, certainly, ask him to come in."

A moment later Coquennil entered, and all rose with cordial greetings—that is, all except Gibelin.

"As you know," explained Coquennil briefly at the judge, "I resigned from the force two years ago. I need not go into details. The point is I now ask to be taken back. That is why I am here."

"But, my dear fellow," replied the chief in frank astonishment, "I understood that you had received a magnificent offer with—"

"Yes, yes, I have."

"With a salary of a hundred thousand francs?"

"It's true, but I have refused it."

Simon and Hauteville looked at Coquennil incredulously.

"May I ask why you have refused it?" asked the chief.

"Partly for personal reasons, largely because I want to have a hand in this case."

Gibelin moved uneasily.

"You think this case so interesting?" put in the judge.

"The most interesting I have ever known," answered the other, and then he added, with all the authority of his line, grave face: "It's more than interesting. It's the most important criminal case Paris has known for three generations."

Again they stared at him.

"My dear Coquennil, you exaggerate," objected M. Simon. "After all, we have only the shooting of a billiard player."

M. Paul shook his head and replied impressively: "The billiard player was a pawn in the game. He became troublesome and was sacrificed. He is of no importance, but there's a greater game than billiards here with a master player, and I'm going to be in it."

"Why do you think it's a great game?" questioned the judge.

"Why do I think anything? Why did I think a commonplace pickpocket at the Bon Marche was a notorious criminal, wanted by two countries? Why did I think we should find the real clue to that Bordeaux counterfeiting gang in a Pussy wineshop? Why did I think it necessary tonight to be on the cat this young American took and not behind it in another club?"

"Because a good detective knows certain things before he can prove them and acts on his knowledge. That is what distinguishes him from an ordinary detective."

"Meaning me?" challenged Gibelin. "Not at all," replied M. Paul smoothly. "I only say that—"

"One moment," interrupted M. Simon. "Do I understand that you were with the driver who took this American away from here tonight?"

Coquennil smiled. "I was not with the driver. I was the driver, and I had the honor of receiving 5 francs from my distinguished associate."

He bowed mockingly to Gibelin and held up a silver piece. "I shall keep this among my mementoes."

"It was a foolish trick, a perfectly useless trick," declared Gibelin, furiously.

"Perhaps not," answered the other, with aggravating politeness. "Perhaps it was a rather nice coup leading to very important results."

"What results?"

"Yes. What results?" echoed the judge.

"Let me ask first," replied Coquennil deliberately. "What you regard as the most important thing to be known in this case just now?"

"The name of the woman," answered Hauteville promptly.

"Then the man who gives you this woman's name and address will render a real service?"

"A service?" exclaimed Hauteville. "The whole case rests on this woman."

"Come, come," interrupted the chief. "What are you driving at?"

"I have the woman's name and address," exclaimed Coquennil.

"Impossible!" they cried.

"I got them by my own efforts, and I will give them up on my own terms. He spoke with a look of fearless purpose that M. Simon well remembered from the old days."

"A thousand devils! How did you do it?" cried Simon.

"I watched the American in the cab as he leaned forward toward the lantern light, and I saw exactly what he was doing. He opened the lady's bag and cut out a leather flap that had her name and address stamped on it."

"No," contradicted Gibelin; "there was no name in the bag. I examined it myself."

"The name was on the underside of the flap," laughed the other, "in gilt letters."

Gibelin's heart sank.

"And you took this flap from the American?" asked M. Simon.

"No, not any violence would have brought my colleague into the thing, for he was close behind, and I wanted this knowledge for myself."

"What did you do?" pursued the chief.

"I let the young man cut the flap into small pieces and drop them one by one as we drove through dark little streets. And I noted where he dropped the pieces. Then I drove back and picked them up—that is, all but two."

"Marvelous!" muttered Hauteville. "I had a small searchlight lantern to help me. That was one of the things I took from my desk," he added to Poqueot.

"And these pieces of leather with the name and address, you have them?" continued the chief.

"I have them."

"With you?"

"Yes."

"May I see them?"

"Certainly. If you will promise to respect them as my personal property."

Simon hesitated. "You mean"—He frowned and then said impatiently, "Oh, yes, I promise that."

Coquennil drew an envelope from his breast pocket and from it he took a number of white leather fragments.

And he showed the chief that most of these fragments were stamped in gilt letters or parts of letters.

"I'm satisfied," declared Simon after examining several of the fragments and returning them. "Don't Den!" he stormed at Gibelin. "And you had that bag in your hands?"

Gibelin sat silent. This was the wickedest moment in his career.

"Well," continued the chief, "we must have these pieces of leather. What are your terms?"

"I told you," said Coquennil, "I want to be put back on the force. I want to handle this case."

M. Simon thought a moment. "That ought to be easily arranged. I will see the prefect do police about it in the morning."

But the other demurred. "I ask you to see him tonight. It's ten minutes to his house in an automobile. I'll wait here."

The chief smiled. "You're in a hurry, aren't you? Well, so are we. Will you come with me, Hauteville?"

"Yes."

In less than an hour the men returned with good news for the great detective.

"The prefect was extremely nice," said M. Hauteville. "He took our view at once."

"Then my commission is signed?"

"Precisely," answered the chief. "You are one of us again, and—I'm glad."

"Thank you, both of you," said M. Paul, with a quiver of emotion.

CHAPTER VI. THE WEAPON.

RIGHT across from the Ansonia, on the Rue Marbeuf, was a little wineshop that remained open all night for the accommodation of cab drivers and belated pedestrians, and to this Coquennil and the commissary now withdrew. Be-

NOT ONLY THE INDIGESTION BUT ALL STOMACH DISTRESS VANISHES.

Take a Little Diapiesin Now and Your Stomach Will Feel Fine Five Minutes Later?

If your meals don't fit comfortably or you feel bloated after eating and you believe it is the food which fills you, if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, crumblings of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your Stomach of poisons, excessive acids and stomach gas which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Bilioussness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapiesin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose—that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapiesin will regulate any out of order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort all of any kind of food you eat.

fore anything else the detective wished to get from M. Poqueot his impressions of the case. And he asked Papa Tignol to come with them for a fortifying glass. They analyzed the known facts carefully.

Suddenly Coquennil stopped talking abruptly to look at a comical little man with a large mouth, the owner of the place, who had been hovering about for some moments as if anxious to say something.

"What is it, my friend?" asked Coquennil good naturedly.

At this the proprietor coughed in embarrassment and motioned to a plain, thin faced woman in the front room, who came forward with dogged shyness, begging the gentlemen to forgive her if she had done wrong, but there was something on her conscience, and she couldn't sleep without telling it.

"Well!" broke in Poqueot impatiently, but Coquennil gave the woman a reassuring look, and she went on to explain that she was a spinster living in a little attic room of the next house overlooking the Rue Marbeuf. She worked as a seamstress all day in a hot, crowded attiler, and when she came home at night she loved to go out on her balcony. She would stand there and brush her hair while she watched the sunset deepen and the swallowtail circle over the chimney tops.

"But, my dear woman," smiled Coquennil, "what has that to do with me? I have very little hair and no time to brush it."

Robber of Scottdale Store Hid His Plunder Near Connellsville.

A FORMER HOTEL PORTER HERE

Ray Plowden Charged With Bold
Entry of Miller's Clothing Store Brought Back From McKeesport and Committed to Jail at Greensburg.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, March 18.—Justice of the Peace John C. Steiner this morning held Ray Plowden, alias Allen Lewis, a negro, a few years ago a porter at a Connellsville hotel, and a familiar figure in that town, in the sum of $100 on a charge of breaking and entering. Plowden is accused of climbing to the top of the three-story building of Miller Brothers, clothing store of Pittsburgh street, cutting out the skylight, robbing the store, letting the plunder down to the ground and escaping on Wednesday night.

The stolen goods were recovered by Chief of Police Frank McCadden and Constable P. J. O'Donnell of Scottdale, at the deserted log cabin on the Cranberry place about a mile below Connellsville, on the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad.

Plowden was arrested by a railroad detective on a train at McKeesport the morning following the robbery, was detained by the McKeesport authorities and brought back from that place by Constable O'Donnell yesterday. O'Donnell took Plowden to the Greensburg jail this morning on the 8:10 a. m. train, immediately following the hearing at the office of the Justice. Plowden not being able to get bail, Plowden's explanation of the possession of a blue traveling bag, and a complete new outfit, including high priced and gaily colored socks, was untrue but surrounding circumstances of nature did not corroborate his wild tale when investigation was made by the authorities.

Plowden declared that he had been at Fairmont, W. Va., working in a steel mill that he came to Connellsville where he met a white man and a colored man at the H. & O. station, in Connellsville. He asserted that the two had a quantity of new clothes and a couple of watches, and that he wanted to have a share of these and was invited to accompany the pair down to the Cranberry cabin. Below the Young transfer where a division of the spoils, which Plowden said he suspected had been stolen, would be made. Plowden said that he accompanied the two men to the deserted cabin and there at the point of a revolver he held up the two men and made them give what he needed to make up in outfit.

Last evening Chief McCadden and Constable O'Donnell went to Connellsville and searched the cabin. The trail found the upper which Plowden had secreted his store crushed down under the floor of the cabin of the officers. The lower deserted cabin, McCadden said today, was made witness that three people had not been in it recently. On the floor covered thickly with dust there was only one set of footprints going in and coming out, and the same track from the gate in and out.

A large cloth leather telescope suit was found with four suits of clothes of the latest cut, and the best goods and of a conservative shade. There were four pairs of fine shoes, two women's and two men's, and a vest. All the goods were of the best quality and would fetch the Miller Brothers. The goods were hidden between the floor of the cabin.

The arrest which was made in the Miller store was identified as one stolen from them a few days ago. Plowden denied ownership of this one. The officers made him divest himself of his good garments and remove the old clothes that he had in the another building where Plowden caught and arrested. The also gave him a pair of new shoes and made him remove the old ones he wore.

Plowden denied being in Scottdale for years. It is said that at one time he was a resident of tough part of Scottdale a suburb of Scottdale, that the officers closed up a few cars and on complaint of the residents there and it is said Plowden then served a term in the workhouse on the charge of holding up a milkman.

Millinery Opening.

The Brown Millinery Company on Pittsburgh street, Scottdale, announce their annual Easter millinery opening today and Saturday, March 18 and 19. The beautifully contrasted colors and variety of styles shown in the patterns and hats designed for wear on any occasion are of greater excellence than ever. A visit to the store will be of unusual interest and profit to all.

One Case of Typhoid.

The second case of typhoid fever in town during the year has a sufferer. It is a little son of Bruce and Mrs. R. P. 13th, of Arthur Avenue. Having been taken with the disease but which had not a single day, the child died in its bed at 11:45 this morning. Dr. G. H. 141 guaranteed the home.

Attended the Theatre.

Quite a number of Scottdale people were in Connellsville attending the Soisson Theatre last evening to see "A Gentleman From Mississippi," which pleased them greatly.

Wives and Mothers.

Every wife and mother has a right not only to look for a home—we mean by that a cottage or a palace, as circumstances will permit—but she should demand it. If a man is unwilling to face the issues of life, he should never enter the marriage state. Now, Mr. Mann, think that over. Perhaps you have been thinking seriously of it for some time but cannot see your way just clear to build at this time; if that's the case maybe we can help you. We have helped hundreds of others to own their own homes and we are willing to help you too. Come in and see us. Connellsville Construction Company.
